

THE HEAT BALANCE APPROACH TO DEFINING COMFORT IN BUILDINGS

Thermal comfort is famously defined as ‘that state of mind which expresses satisfaction with the thermal environment. The aim of those investigating comfort has been to define the thermal environment that a heating, ventilating and air-conditioning (HVAC) system has to provide in order to ‘ensure’ a comfortable environment.

Write a short article on the above topic.